

Eagles TV host teams up with conservative pundit on new podcast

Eagles host and team reporter Molly Sullivan wants to test the notion that sports and politics don't mix.

Sullivan, who has a bit of idle time on her hands thanks to the NFL offseason, has teamed up with lawyer and conservative media pundit Erin Elmore to launch a new podcast called the Political Postgame Podcast that promises to jump headfirst into an area of sports most commentators happily choose to avoid.

Sports have a long history of being linked to social activism, from Muhammad Ali's criticism of the Vietnam War to Colin Kaepernick's protests against racial injustice. Of course, President Donald Trump ratcheted things up over the past two seasons by railing against players who chose to follow Kaepernick's lead in protesting racism and police brutality during the national anthem, going so far as to disinvite the Eagles from celebrating their Super Bowl victory last year at the White House.

According to Sullivan, who has a very public role with the Eagles, the decision to go down this potentially controversial road with Elmore was a spur-of-the-moment idea the two came up with after taking a SoulCycle class together.

"Erin represents the political angle and I will bring the sports," Sullivan said. "The catch is we don't really know each other yet so listeners will be on this journey with us from the beginning."

The duo recorded their first podcast yesterday, with WIP host John Blanchard acting as executive producer. The episode is expected to drop today on iTunes, Spotify, and other podcast platforms.

Molly Sullivan
@MollySullivanTV

